Supported Living

Supported living is a way of living away from your family instead of going into Residential Care. You might live in your own group flat, live alone in the community or share a house. You would have your own tenancy or licence. This means YOU rent your home from a housing provider such as a Housing Association or a landlord.

Supported living means that you are supported to live in the way that you want. Your housing and support is built around you rather than you fitting in to a service. You might live on your own, in a cluster scheme or in a shared house. You get your support from 1 of 6 Care Providers who have a contract with the Learning Disability Service.

You will have an assessment to see if Supported Living is right for you and what available accommodation best matches what you need and what you want. You choose what you want to eat and when you want to go out. If you have an Individual Budget or a Direct Payment you will have more choice about who supports you.

Supported living is not just for people who are more able or independent. People with health needs or high support needs can also be supported to live in their own home.
